Mandy's Twists - The Irony (Mandy's Twists - Irony) FE Ndhlovu

How very wrong Mandy was when she hatched a plan to migrate to Hillbrow from Majaneng, in a desperate attempt to break with her harrowing childhood past. She was convinced she was turning a new chapter in her life, a chapter that offered the opportunity to start on a clean slate. However, when she became a victim of a gang rape just a few weeks after she arrived in Hillbrow, the brutal emotional assault triggered the relapse of intense anger Mandy harboured since childhood.

Blinded by deep sense for vengeance, she masterminded a series of grisly murders, whose target victims were men. It was only after her ninth victim that she felt her anger satiated. With the help of the sizeable lottery winnings of a while back, Mandy studied law and pursued her professional childhood dream of being a lawyer. Ironically, with her past criminal identity still veiled, she joined the Prosecution Directorate and worked closely with some of the investigators who were still after her trail.

Unfortunately, just a few months short of 55 years she was diagnosed with Acute Granulocytic Leukaemia. The disease went into remission but only for a few years. Growing frail by the day, Judge Mandy was granted early retirement and as she lied on her deathbed, her spooky past came back to haunt her. Intensely feeling unsafe to go to the grave with her jaw-dropping past, Judge Mandy called a media briefing and confessed to the historical heinous crimes very much to the world's utter shock and disbelief. After a brief hearing, Judge Mandy was found guilty as confessed. Ironically, the State set aside sentencing indefinitely.
