Once Melissa Kosciuszko

Jonathan is studying to become a priest. He is three days from taking vows. He is not going to be a priest. Rebecca's major is prelaw. She is supposed to take over her father's law firm. She is not going to be lawyer. Their paths cross at exactly the right moment, when they most need to hear what the other has to say. Jonathan's structured life is turned sideways, but he also learns how to forgive himself. It had been self-defense, not murder. He trusts Rebecca's judgment. Rebecca finds the strength to stand up to her father. She does not want to be a cheerleader. She does not care about trends. Jonathan likes the real her. She must be worth knowing. He is her first but also her once. Then Rebecca gets off the train, leaves Jonathan. She must leave him to his peace, to his path. He feels no peace. He changed everything for her, knowing she would be gone when he woke. They must each deal with the flipping of their worlds, disownment and loneliness, without each other's comfort and strength, with only memories of the one day that changed everything.
