Excerpt from Simon De Montfort: Earl of Leicester, the Creator of the House of Commons

Dr. Pauli's observation at the opening of the Preface of his work, - that every great movement in human Society is embodied and illustrated in the character of one pre-eminent man, - will hardly be objected to by any order of readers; but it probably approves itself most warmly to those who are the oldest, as well as the most worthy. The relish of the study of History follows the same law in the case, in regard to age, of a people and an individual. In the youthful days of a nation the Historical interest is implicated in the suspense and romance of war and conquest, in the poetry of adventure, and the triumph or grief of mighty revolutions of fortune. As a community grows older in experience, the character of its interest in History changes essentially.
