Goddess of the Moon (A Diana Racine Psychic Suspense) Polly Iyer

A newborn is kidnapped from her home hours after being released from the birthing center, and psychic Diana Racine is asked by her lover, Lieutenant Ernie Lucier of the New Orleans Police Department, to act as a consultant on the case. Can she glean any vibes from where the baby slept? Clutching the infant's blanket in her hands, Diana envisions the abducted baby in the placidness of a sun-drenched pink room. She also senses a pervasive aura of evil, enough to send ominous chills up her spine. When a computer search results in more kidnapped babies in nearby states, a common thread develops. But nothing prepares Diana and Lucier for the note that draws the psychic deeper into the investigation. Under a picture of a star and crescent moon are the words, "Diana, we await you."
