If you have nothing nice to say, say it twice.' Such is Pree's motto in life. How different the sharp tongued Pree is to Katherine, a suburban housewife and mother. And yet both these women are intertwined mysteriously in a bond that will unravel as they face an unexpected death. This novel details the coming together, and ultimate disintegration, of a group of friends. Where major relationship changes follow seemingly insignificant events. Set in Melbourne, against a backdrop of the Beatles music from the time, all is not as it appears in this comic but dark tale of misunderstandings and incidental hurt. 'Pree and her cohorts do for Balwyn what Edna Everage did for Moonee Ponds.' — Evelyn Krape, comedienne (ex Pram Factory) 'A very original work, very refreshing and a good solid read. This is a very intense piece of writing, honest and at times shocking, quite unsettling, incredibly written. A very noteworthy first novel which deserves nothing less than five stars.' —Wendy O'Hanlon, Acres Australia 'This is a fine and well written novel, based in Melbourne, and more than a little naughty.' —John Morrow's Pick of the Week Shortlisted in the Women's Weekly Short Story Competition in 2009, this novel completes that story.
