If it's so wrong, how can it feel so right?

Penelope shouldn't feel the way that she does about him, especially not a boy who was about to become her stepbrother. When he shares a deep, dark secret in her bedroom, feelings stir within her, feelings she knows she must resist.

He's a rude, arrogant cock. He has all the girls. No matter badly he treats them, they line up, or they lay down and spread out, and they beg him for more. The things he does to those girls, and the way that it makes Penelope feel, she realizes that she wants him to do all of those things and more. To her.

After he leaves home she never expects to hear from him again. On a beach, by chance, on the worst of her bad days, Penelope comes face to face with an arrogant billionaire. All of the feelings she kept hidden for all of those years rise to the brim and spill out. Words that can't be unsaid lead the young couple to a forbidden place beyond the point of no return.
